ANNUAL MEETING, ELECTIONS AND BUSINESS MEETING OF TLA AT SHUBERT ARCHIVE ON FRIDAY, OCTOBER 29

The Theatre Library Association will hold the annual meeting and election of new members to the Executive Board on Friday, October 29, 1982, at the Shubert Archive in the Lyceum Theatre building, 149 West 45th Street, New York City.

The meeting will begin at 5:30 pm and will be highlighted by a panel on the appraisal of large performing arts collections, from 6:30 to 7:30.

The business meeting at 5:30 will include discussion of future numbers of Performing Arts Resources, the results of the Collection Management and Preservation Conference held in the spring, the recent SIBMAS Congress in New York, and TLA's 1983 summer program meeting in Los Angeles. The results of the vote for Executive Board members will be announced. A mail ballot was sent to all TLA members in good standing. If you plan to attend the meeting, it may be turned in for tallying then, rather than mailed.

The members of the Appraisers’ Panel will include Gene Bruck, Marianne Wurlitzer Bruck, Louis A. Rachow and Richard Stoddard. Brigitte Kueppers and Brooks McNamara will comment on the Shubert Archive.

Since the Lyceum Theatre is in the heart of the Broadway theatre district, many TLA members may wish to take advantage of the time and place to attend the theatre or to visit the new midtown Theatre Museum of the Theatre Collection of the Museum of the City of New York located in the Minskoff Arcade at 44th Street and Broadway.

PRESERVATION MANAGEMENT OF PERFORMING ARTS COLLECTIONS NOTEBOOK AND MANUAL

The Theatre Library Association's Conference on Preservation Management of Performing Arts Collections proved to be a landmark session in the field. It brought together, for the first time, the country's leading conservators with some of our most dedicated curators and archivists of theatrically oriented collections. The result was a unique exchange of problems, ideas and procedures which heightened everyone’s awareness of the present situation and its implication for the future of our performing arts heritage.

The Conservation Center for Art and Historic Artifacts, of Philadelphia, acted as consultants and the conference was supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

A manual is being prepared based not only upon the presentations, but also incorporating the problems, questions and suggested methods and resources which were discussed during the sessions. The manual will be sent to all of the conference participants.

Those who attended the conference also received a notebook containing pamphlets and other prepared material on preservation practices, supply sources, regional conservation centers, and a basic bibliography. Only items of basic practical interest to a mixed media collection were included.

ATA HONORS PAUL MYERS
Paul Myers, retired Curator of the Billy Rose Theatre Collection, was presented with the American Theatre Association's 1982 Citation for Distinguished Service to the Theatre during the annual ATA convention which met this summer in New York City.

In his introduction, ATA president Jerry Clark spoke of the Billy Rose Theatre Collection as the "quintessential collection for American theatre scholars if not those of the entire world," and called Mr. Myers "the professional bibliophile extraordinaire."

Mr. Myers joined the Collection in 1947 when it occupied a small corner of the Main Reading Room of The New York Public Library. He became Curator in 1967, two years after the Collection moved to Lincoln Center. He retired to his country home in Millbrook, N.Y. in 1981. He is an Honorary Life Member of the Theatre Library Association.

In order to make this important information available to those who could not attend the sessions, the Theatre Library Association is offering both the conference notebook and the upcoming manual for a total cost of $60.00, plus $5.00 for shipping and handling.

The notebook itself is a sturdy, three-ring binder, and will be sent immediately upon receipt of the order. The manual is currently being edited and will be issued within the year.

Please make your checks for $65.00 payable to the Theatre Library Association, 111 Amsterdam Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10023.

NEW YORK STATE/REGIONAL CONFERENCES

This fall the Board of Regents and the Commissioner of Education are again sponsoring ten regional conferences across New York state to promote discussion on key issues in education. Of special interest to TLA members is a proposal for networking among cultural institutions in New York state. Participants in the conferences will be asked to indicate the key needs and goals of their repositories and to explore together potential opportunities and strategies for meeting these through some form of networking. Depending on the views of the participants in each region, discussions will cover such common needs as conservation, staff training, technical and advisory services, description and publication of guides to historical records, and grants and fund raising for historical records work. To register for the conference in your area or to receive a copy of the brief discussion paper, "Networking: Concepts in Practice," please contact David Johnson, Room 225, Education Building, Washington Avenue, Albany, N.Y. 12224, or phone (518) 474-7744.

MACAULEY THEATRE COLLECTION AT THE UNIVERSITY OF LOUISVILLE

The Macauley Theatre Collection contains approximately 1500 photographs, posters and handbills which were given to John Macauley by the actors and actresses who appeared in his Louisville theatre from 1873-1925. Many of the photographs are autographed and inscribed to Colonel Macauley.

In the fifty-two years of the Macauley's operation, the American theatre was a nation-wide mass entertainment form, based on the touring companies so abundantly represented in the collection. The Macauley Collection provides a unique opportunity for the scholar to examine, in microcosm, the theatrical entertainment of the period in a manner currently not possible elsewhere. By looking at these materials, the theatre scholar can explore the range of entertainment offered in a typical touring theatrical center, involving such subjects as the relative balance of entertainment forms, the frequency of appearance of major national stars, and the identification of performers of local or regional prominence.

The Macauley Theatre Collection has recently been completely cataloged by the Photographic Archives and is now available for research. A computerized data base has been formed for this collection allowing for access by performer, production, photographer, and photographic or graphic process.

For more information about this collection contact: David Horvath, University of Louisville, Photographic Archives, Louisville, Ky. 40292, (502) 588-6752.

OBITS

New Performance, a journal of the performing arts published by the Oberlin Dance Collective, San Francisco, ceased publication following the Spring 1982 issue.

Exchange, A Journal of Opinion for the Performing Arts, has ceased publication although the ATA Committee on Theatre Research is interested in saving the journal.

Michael O'Connor, in a letter to subscribers, expressed the feelings of the New Performance staff: “To make a long and complicated story short and simple, the economics of it don’t work. Among a number of other factors, this is due to a change in the arts funding picture. One of our hopes as we close up shop is that the structure of support for the arts which has been built up in the last ten to fifteen years won’t be effectively dismantled by a misguided government policy.

Another of our hopes, of course, is that we have contributed something useful to the progress of performance during the time we have been publishing. One of the ironies of our demise is that we are stopping at a time when performance seems to have arrived at a particularly vital juncture in its history. There is more interesting and more accomplished new work being done in theatre, music and dance than at any time in recent memory, particularly in the San Francisco area where we have been headquartered. If we can leave with a sense that we have played some part in promoting intelligent discussion about this work, and therefore encouraging its intelligent development, we leave satisfied.”

RARE BOOK SECURITY SYSTEM

The Antiquarian Booksellers’ Association of America has published Rare Books and Manuscript Thefts: A Security System for Librarians, Booksellers, and Collectors. The purpose of the system is fivefold: to coordinate efforts, nationally and internationally, to catch book thieves; to assist in the recovery and restoration of stolen books to their rightful owners; to quickly alert the entire book world of the details of book thefts; to discourage thieves from thinking they can profit from stealing books; and, to aid in the vigorous prosecution of book thieves when captured.

The security network, now in full operation, has been established with the cooperation of the Society of American Archivists, the Manuscript Society, the American Library Association (A.C.R.L.-R.B.M.S.), the F.B.I., the U.S. Customs Service, Interpol, and a number of other interested national and international organizations. The Society of American Archivists has eliminated its own notification newsletter and joined our coordinated system, based on the BAM-BAM and CLAM network described in the booklet.

Copies of Rare Books and Manuscript Thefts may be obtained without charge from Antiquarian Booksellers’ Association of America, Inc., 50 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10020.

READERS REPORT...

Drama students, performers and readers are always on the prowl for new and varied dramatic readings and monologues, whether for the professional stage, or merely for home entertainment. Clay Franklin, a leading exponent of the monologue, was well aware of this fact when he highly praised Mixed Company: an Assortment of Monologues was published in 1959. His latest, Anybody We Know?, is a worthy companion piece to it and the numerous readings published since then. As Greer Garson states in her foreword to Mixed Company, “a kindly sense of humor and acute observation illumine his gallery of recognizable contemporary portraits.”

— Louis A. Rachow

The Stage in the 18th Century is composed of eleven essays originally presented as papers in 1979-80 under the auspices of the McMaster (University) Association for Eighteenth-Century Studies. The articles included in this volume cover a wide range of topics. Among them are a study of Addison’s Cato as a barometer of political thought throughout the century; an analysis of censorship in France and its ultimate demise; an evaluation of the changing image of the actor in eighteenth-century Germany; a survey of changing styles in plays written for children during the century; and, an examination of John Philip Kemble’s acting as revealed in paintings of the great actor.

While the level of scholarship is consistently high and the essays well written, the title of the book is misleading. The Stage in the 18th Century provides little information about what actually took place on the eighteenth-century stage. Instead, it focuses upon the role of the play or the player in society or upon the pressures of society exerted upon the artist. Emphasis is upon the social, political, economic, religious or moral contexts of the drama, not upon the scenography or the mise-en-scene of eighteenth-century theatre. As a study of the artist’s relationship to society, the book is quite valuable; as an examination of what physically occurred on the eighteenth-century stage, however, it is of limited use.

DIRECTORS IMMORTALIZED ON TAPE AND FILM

The Oral History Program of the Directors Guild of America (DGA) chronicles directors who have no previous biographical documentation. For each director the guild interviews, it also studies a studio craftsman. The former group includes Henry King and King Vidor, who began work in 1912 and 1915, respectively; the latter, David Butler and Lesley Selander whose careers started in 1917 and 1919. More than two dozen projects have been completed by free-lance interviewers under the supervision of Guild Special Projects Officer David Shepard. The guild donates copies of edited transcripts to film research libraries in New York City, Wisconsin and Los Angeles and upon request provides transcripts at cost.
