MINUTES OF ANNUAL THEATRE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION MEETING

TLA President Geri Duclow brought the annual business meeting to order at 5:00PM on Friday, October 25th, 1996 at the Shubert Archive. She called for the approval of the minutes of the last business meeting.

Richard M. Buck, TLA Treasurer, handed out his report indicating that TLA remains solvent but that membership was declining slightly by attrition. Maryann Chach, editor of Broadside and chair of the Publications Committee, noted that the Spring-Summer issue of Broadside is out and that the Fall issue would be out after the TLA meeting. Broadside is still looking for editorial help. Performing Arts Resources (vol.20) on Denishawn collections is late but in good shape. Susan Brady, guest editor, has almost all the copy and plans to get the volume to the printer by the end of November. The volume will include articles on Ted Shawn/Ruth St. Denis material at NYPL’s Dance Collection, the John Lindquist Collection at the Harvard Theatre Collection, the Killinger Collection of Denishawn, and Ted Shawn and his Men Dancers’ Costumes at Florida State, and an article on Denishawn Dances Notated for Purchase. Bob Taylor, Chair of the Strategic Planning committee, spoke about the committee’s work in addressing TLA’s long range goals.

Geri then introduced Marti LoMonaco, the Chair of the Nominations committee. Marti thanked her committee for their participation. She then announced the winners. Geri Duclow (Free Library of Philadelphia) was reelected President. Susan Brady (Yale University), a board member, became to paean Ethel Merman.” [SAY ALOUD]. Reprising the radio host’s phrase, Bob announced, “Tonight, we are here to paean Dick Buck.” [LAUGHTER]. Geri Duclow read a letter from Dorothy Swerdlove (now retired to Arizona). Don Fowle shared some reminiscences. Steve Vallillo read Mary Ann Jensen’s note. [See boxes p.1-2 for excerpts]. Catherine Johnson prefaced the presentation to Dick of a money clip from Tiffany’s (we hoped an appropriate gift) with the remark -- “That if Dick had been in charge, this would have been completed. As it is, we are giving you the money clip only to take it back to have it engraved. The engraving will read, To Richard M. Buck, ‘The Buck Stops Here’ TLA.” The Shubert Archive contributed the Vice President, Rosemary Cullen (Brown University) and Paul Newman (a lawyer and private collector) were returned to the board. Kevin Winkler (New York Public Library for the Performing Arts) and Annette Fern (Harvard University) were welcomed as new board members. The next board meeting is scheduled for Friday, March 7th at the Shubert Archive.

Geri then introduced current Vice President, Robert Taylor (Billy Rose Theatre Collection, NYPL) who hosted a fond, mini “Roast” of Dick Buck. Bob recalled growing up listening to a weekly musical theatre program on the radio. On the show, the host would offer a tribute to some leading light of the Broadway musical theatre. One night, Bob remembered the radio host said “Stay tuned -- in a few moments, we will be back to paean Ethel Merman.” [SAY ALOUD]. HENDERSON ON MIELZINER
Virginia Woolf described the challenge of the biographer by asking rhetorically, "How can one make a life of six cardboard boxes, full of tailors' bills, love letters, and old picture postcards?" Mary Henderson provided a unique response to that challenge as she previewed her major new work on the life and career of legendary scenic designer Jo Mielziner at the Theatre Library Association's annual meeting, hosted by the Shubert Archive, on October 25th. Henderson is well known to TLA constituents and the academic world through her years as Curator of the Theatre Collection of the Museum of the City of New York, and her many publications, including The City and the Theatre (1973), Theater in America (1986), winner of the George Freedley Award, and Broadway Ballyhoo (1989).

Henderson began by giving the crowd some humorous instruction in how to say -- and how not to say -- the designer's famously mispronounced name, and then went on to place Mielziner in the context of the contemporary theatre. His career, which began in the early 1920s and extended through five decades and 270 Broadway shows, ending with his last production, The Baker's Wife, in 1976. For a 20 year period, from the mid-40s through the mid-60s, Mielziner was Broadway's preeminent set designer. Henderson noted that not only was he one of the first set designers to excel as a lighting designer, he also contributed costumes to his shows, a surprise to many in the audience.

Henderson’s research took her through the 40 transfiles and 80 boxes of drawings that comprise the Jo Mielziner Collection at the Billy Rose Theatre Collection of the New York Public Library for the Performing Arts. Much of her energy was spent sifting through reviews of all his production, many of which, she pointed out, ignored the set designer's contributions. More importantly, Henderson drew upon her memories of Mielziner's work, including some of his most acclaimed productions, such as A Streetcar Named Desire and Death of a Salesman. She described her research as a "fascinating journey" during which she interviewed dozens of Mielziner's friends and colleagues, a number of whom, such as Walter Kerr, have since died. While Elia Kazan and Arthur Miller were prominent among her interview subjects, Mary did not equivocate in her favorites: the stagehands, she said, saw a different side of the designer, working closely with him to translate his design concepts to the stage, and were by far the best and most informative interviewees.

Henderson spoke of her initial trepidation in attempting her first biography, describing how she immersed herself in information about Mielziner's background, including the voluminous correspondence in his collection, biographies by contemporaries such as Joshua Logan, and dissertations and masters theses. She also spoke quite candidly of the frustrations of the five year book project, to be published in 1997 by Knopf. Her interviews resulted in over 130 audio tapes which she painstakingly transcribed herself. Many details of Mielziner's early life, which she found in her mother's correspondence and included in early drafts, were eliminated by her publisher. She humorously noted the advantages and disadvantages of utilizing her bed as a combination file cabinet and processing space.

A lively question and answer session ended Henderson's presentation, and she spoke with great enthusiasm of her interviews with important Mielziner colleagues. Elia Kazan, she said, was particularly eloquent in his praise of Mielziner's contribution to the original production of Death of a Salesman. (She also noted that his skeletal set for that play, with its translucent walls, was a highly influential design concept that remains in use today). Arthur Miller, she said, called Mielziner's set for his play simply "the greatest set design in the twentieth century." She noted, too, Robert Edmond Jones and Lee Simonson as strong influences on Mielziner's development as a scenic artist. Mary was particularly informative in responding to questions about Mielziner's design of theatre spaces, describing the numerous compromises he faced in designing such theatres as the Mark Taper Forum in Los Angeles and the Vivian Beaumont Theater at Lincoln Center.

Henderson also discussed the upcoming Mielziner exhibition "Scenic Poet of the Theatre," for which she is curator. The exhibition, which runs November 20, 1996 through April 26, 1997 in the Performing Arts Library's Main Gallery, will feature sketches and renderings, as well as correspondence with notable Mielziner collaborators. (On December 4th, Mary will also present a free public program on Mielziner at the Performing Arts Library).

Henderson concluded with the observation that she could never undertake such a massive project if she didn't genuinely like the person whose life she was tracing. Her presentation demonstrated not only her respect and admiration for Jo Mielziner, the designer, but a deep affection for Jo Mielziner, the individual. --Kevin Winkler

REPORT on the 21ST SIBMAS CONGRESS, HELSINKI, AUGUST 31-SEPTEMBER 6, 1996

The topic of the 21st Congress of SIBMAS (International Association of Libraries and Museums of the Performing Arts) was "Winds of Change-New Technology." Hanna-Leena Helavouri, head of the Helsinki Theatre Museum, organized the meetings and social events, ably assisted by her colleague, Meri Eerola. The Congress sessions were informative and useful to the attendees, especially those sessions that emphasized new internet technologies and creations of home pages by performing arts museums and libraries. There was a discussion of virtual reality and interactive animation, as well as the copyright problems created by the internet. A paper on the clearance of ownership when seeking multi-media rights was both amusing and informative, giving an overview of how devilishly complicated a process it is. The plenary papers on fund-raising were somewhat less successful, since the presenters emphasized the commercial aspects (advertising, selling product, and seeking commercial sponsorship), rather than foundation giving and estate planning, which most institutions represented depend on in some way, rather than "going commercial."

At the Council meeting on Sept 1, budgets were approved, nominations for the officers, Executive Committee and Council were made, recommendations for the locations of the 1998 and 2000 Congresses were made, the suggested modifications of the SIBMAS rules were approved in principle (pending approval of the General Assembly), and the successful publication of the First Edition of the new SIBMAS International Directory of Libraries and Museums of Performing Arts was discussed.

At the Directory Commission meeting later in the week, it was suggested that in order to establish more uniformity in the entries for later editions, that countries concerned with this problem would establish committees to examine the directory entries and send their comments to Paul Ulrich in Berlin. Other suggestions included updating the Directory every 4 years, instead of two.

At the General Assembly, most of the Council recommendations were approved, except the revision of the SIBMAS rules. The most radical change in the proposal was the elimination of National Centres and giving every individual member one vote (including one vote for each institutional member). This had been approved by the Council twice, but at the General Assembly, a group of members representing countries with strong National Centers used the present weighted votes to defeat the change in the rules. Another subcommittee of the Council will be appointed by the new SIBMAS president, Noelle Guibert, head of the Department des Arts de Spectacle of the Bibliotheque Nationale, to re-examine the rules once again.

Other new SIBMAS officers are Claire Hudson (Theatre Museum, London) and Maria Theresa Iovinelli (Biblioteca e Raccolta Teatrale de Burcardo, Rome), Vice Presidents, and Willem Rodenhuiss (University of Amsterdam), Secretary General. Georg Geldner (Austrian Theatre Museum, Vienna) remains as Treasurer/Membership Secretary. Rosabel Wang (Theatre Research Data Center, Brooklyn College) was the only United State representative elected to the Council. I hope that TLA members will support Rosabel in her representation of the United States in this most important international organization.

The General Assembly approved the Theatre Museum in London, England, as the site for the 1998 Congress (either directly before or after the 1998 Congress for the International Federation for Theatre Research in Canterbury, which will probably be July 6-13. The site for the 2000 Congress will be Paris, France, probably at the new Bibliothèque de France, dates to be determined.

This was my last SIBMAS Congress in an official capacity. My years working to produce a new International Directory, and representing TLA on the Council, I believe, were well spent. I hope that there will continue to be a close relationship between TLA and SIBMAS and among the individual members of both as well. --Richard M. Buck
